Sebi's new product: MF's efficiency, PMS' control

TRUTH BE TOLD

HARSH ROONGTA

In early 2000 my family and I returned to Mumbai by train. The entire train emptied at Borivali station, and a large crowd converged towards the sole bridge. As another train arrived, the crowd on the platform swelled further.

The bridge became jampacked, and the crush of people created a real risk of a stampede. We chose safety over risk and moved towards a pillar, creating a small safe space for ourselves. We exited safely after some time. The price we paid for safety was the delay in exiting the platform.

I shared this experience with our client, Mohan, who was debating whether to invest in small-cap stocks via a mutual fund (MF) or a portfolio management service (PMS). Both are professionally managed. but their structures differ. An MF pools investments. giving all investors equal units, while a PMS manages individual portfolios separately.

To illustrate, if a fund manager convinces four investors to invest ₹1 crore each (total ₹4 crore) in 50 small-cap stocks, there are two options. In the MF route, the money is pooled to buy the 50 stocks worth ₹4 crore. Investors own equal shares of the portfolio. In the PMS route, each investor's ₹1 crore is invested in 50 stocks, creating four individual portfolios. The stampede analogy comes into play during a market panic. Unsellable stocks pose a challenge in such a situation. In an MF, the manager sells liquid stocks to meet redemption demands, Cool-headed investors are left owning the unsellable stocks. This leads to an adverse outcome for such investors postrecovery.

In a PMS, each investor's portfolio remains intact. The cool-headed investor's post-recovery portfolio remains unaltered. The market panic has no impact on his post-recovery outcome.

Thus, a PMS offers better control. It gives choice toindividual investors and does not allow the actions of others to affect their

However, this comes at a high cost. Investors in an MF pay tax only upon redemption (buy and sell transactions by their fund managers are not taxed). PMS investors must account for each buy and sell transaction, receipt of dividends, and expenses incurred. They need to pay taxes on capital gains and dividends. In addition, the minimum investment for a PMS is ₹50 lakh, which may deter even risk-tolerant investors like Mohan from trusting a single fund

This is where the new product (NP), approved by the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi), stands out. While the full details are awaited, the NP will enjoy the tax and operational efficiencies of an MF. The minimum ticket size will be ₹10 lakh. It is also likely to have the flexibility to limit redemptions during highpressure situations. reducing the risks of a "run" on the fund.

NP poses a significant threat to the PMS industry by combining the advantages of both PMS and

MF. It is likely that most PMS providers will apply for MF licencesto offer NP. For their core PMS offering, they may target UK and US investors, who facetax disadvantages for investing in MFs

and hence prefer PMS.

Truth be told, NP is likely to be a game-changer for Indian investors. It will offer an efficient alternative to PMS at a lower ticket size. It will evolve over time. Sophisticated (but risky) investment strategies will emerge for investors comfortable with high risk. Indian investors should thank Sebi for ushering in the new year with this innovation.

Housing price growth likely to moderate next year

Interest rate cuts, strong rental demand may keep the market buoyant in 2025

ousing prices rose at a brisk pace in 2024. While the market may remain resilient, the pace of price growth is expected to moderate in 2025.

Amid high and rising prices, buyers need to assess their financial preparedness before making the purchase decision.

Rapid price rise

Residential property prices across markets have risen by 5-10 per cent over the past year. "Certain markets in North India, such as Delhi-NCR and Chandigarh, saw price increases exceeding 14-15 per cent," says Pankaj Kapoor, managing director, Liases Foras.

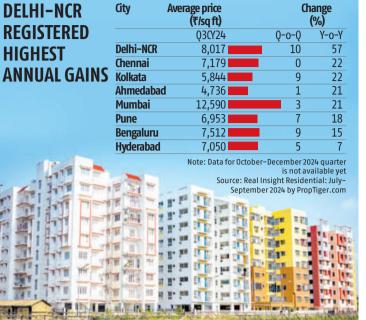

According to data from Colliers and Liases Foras, the average price at the end of September 2024 across eight top markets stood at ₹11,000 per square foot, up 11 per cent yearon-year (Y-o-Y). In specific segments of some markets, the increase was sharper.

"Cities like Bengaluru and Delhi-NCR saw price increase of up to 26 per cent Y-o-Y for 3-4 BHK units, in the July-September quarter," says Vimal Nadar, senior director and head of research, Colliers India.

While demand remained high, supply was constrained. "Slowdown in approvals, due to the general elections in the first half and state elections in the second, resulted in tapering down of new launches," says Anuj Puri, chairman, Anarock Group. According to him, prices also increased due to rising input costs and strong demand.

The premium segment was a key driver. "Residential units priced above ₹1 crore drove market volumes. The sub-₹1 crore segment did not see a similar pickup," says Vivek Rathi, national director of research, Knight Frank India.

Will prices moderate?

likely to continue, but the pace is have become more attractive,' likely to moderate, especially in North India. "In the Delhi-NCR market, we expect moderation in price growth as new supply comes in,"

Puri, too, says that several new launches may occur in 2025 as listed developers have a significant pipeline of new supply.

Positive drivers

Interest rate cuts, expected in 2025, could add to buoyancy in the housing market, according to Nadar.

Strong rental demand could be another driver. "If interest rates decline but rental yields stay strong, expect further appreciation in capital values," says Kapoor.

could also lead to price spurts. "Many areas in cities like Mumbai, which were earlier difficult to access, are Potential impediments Experts believe that price growth is now becoming well connected and If prices rise steeply from current tion, and so on.

says Kapoor.

Growing demand for lifestyleoriented homes, nuclearisation of families, stable income growth, and availability of home financing are other trends that will support property prices, according to Rathi.

He highlights that with the Real Estate Regulatory Authority (Rera) making developers more accountable, consumer confidence has improved.

The state of the economy will also play a key part. "If the economy remains robust, with geopolitical tensions, etc not having a significant impact, then property demand will remain high," says Puri.

He adds that rising cost of land Infrastructure improvements and other inputs could lead to developers increasing prices.

levels, buyers may postpone purchases, according to Puri.

Speculative excesses could also hurt demand. "If builders become overly greedy and start driving prices too high through speculation, that could become an issue," says Kapoor.

Rathi highlights that any threat to economic growth and income could potentially affect demand.

Buy now or wait?

The real estate bull run shows no sign of ending. If prices continue to rise, buyers may end up purchasing at a higher price.

"Those who have the financial wherewithal and are buying for selfuse should take the plunge,' says Puri.

Use rental yield as a barometer to check if the price is attractive. "If the yield is above 3-3.5 per cent, the property is likely to appreciate,' savs Kapoor.

Are you ready financially?

Fear of missing out (Fomo) due to rising prices, desire for a bigger home, etc. can at times cause buvers to overstretch themselves.

"Consider your household's financial health and all your other goals. Buying a house might seem like an urgent goal, but it is rarely the only one," says Vishal Dhawan, founder and chief executive officer (CEO), Plan Ahead Wealth Advisors.

Avoid over-leveraging, especially now when home loan rates are on the higher side.

"Even in dual-income households, EMIs should be planned considering only one income. If the second income becomes temporarily unavailable, say, due to job loss, starting a family, or a sabbatical, you should not feel overburdened," says Dhawan.

Take into account the full cost of home ownership. Besides the property price, there are several other costs - stamp duty and registration fees, ongoing maintenance, renova-
